B. CSG

Under CSG, employers are required to deduct, the employee's contribution from his wage or salary and pay that contribution together with the employer's contribution to the MRA.

As from September 2021 under The Social Contribution and Social Benefits Act 2021, social contributions shall apply on end of year bonus prescribed under an enactment. The social contributions payable on end of year bonus shall be computed separately from the contributions payable on the monthly basic wage/salary. The social contribution on end of year bonus shall be calculated on the basic wage/salary component only (excluding any allowance, commission, productivity payment etc).

Where in a calendar year an employer effects payment of the statutory end of year bonus in more than one month, the social contribution rate applicable in each month shall be determined by cumulating the amount of end of year bonus paid in the respective month.

The rates of contribution applicable are shown in the table below.

MRA strongly recommends payment on a monthly basis together with a return specifying details in respect of the employees.

Where the aggregate monthly basic wage or salary of the employee from all employers does not exceed Rs. 3,000, no contribution should be deducted from the salary of the employee. Only the employer share for NPF/CSG and NSF should be paid.

WAGES OR SALARIES ON WHICH CONTRIBUTIONS & TRAINING LEVY ARE PAYABLE

NPF and NSF contributions are payable at the prescribed rate on an employee's basic wage/salary. Basic wage/salary includes yearly salary compensation but excludes bonus and any other allowance paid in cash or given to the employee in kind.
